

Provincial Court of British Columbia

Picklists are lists of standard terms for court orders that can be used in all BC Provincial Court locations. The small claims picklist is available on courtroom computers so a court clerk can use it to quickly and accurately capture the order a judge makes.

When a judge decides to change the standard wording, a court clerk can edit the term as needed.

Picklists include letter and number codes for each of the standard terms. This helps the court clerk find a term quickly. When a judge says a number before making an order, they are referring to a standard term in the picklist.

For example you might hear a judge say "D11A". This lets the court clerk know that the judge is referring to a term that says "The Court Registry shall schedule this matter for a settlement conference."
